

Katie Aragon

Katie earned her Masters degree in Museum Education from Bank Street College and her BFA from Adelphi University. After several years teaching in a variety of museums and classrooms in New York City, Katie joined the Nassau County Museum of Art as the School and Family Program Educator. Her interest in process-based art and interdisciplinary teaching methods is an important element of her teaching and program development at the Museum. Her own work as an artist focuses on the natural environment.

Katie has taught Summer Art Lab for 7 years and piloted the Summer Art Studio program in 2019.
