

Oksana Danziger

Artist, textile designer, and educator, Oksana Danziger, studied Fine Art at Moscow School of Art and received her Master's Degree in textile art and design from Moscow State Textile University, and extended her studies to residencies in Europe. Her work has been exhibited in Russia, Italy and New York, and has been included in the Moscow's Decorative Art Museum's collection. As a freelance textile designer, she works for several textile design companies, and her silk scarf designs have been sold in collections for Henri Bendel, among other prestigious retailers. Oksana currently teaches at the Art League of Long Island, Huntington Arts Council, and teaches, painting, drawing, fashion and textile classes at The Manes Center at NCMA where she fuses her practices in yoga and mindfulness to her student's art practice.